SIX MINERS MEET DEATH IN PIPER HEADING

General Increase In Water Rates Is Sought

PETITION FOR RATE HIKE IS FILED WITH THE UTILITY BODY

Private Residences Are Included In the Proposed Schedule

HYDRANT RAISE ALSO IS SOUGHT

New Move Made By the Water Company To Increase Revenue

The Alabama Water company, today filed with the Alabama public service commission, a petition for a general increase in water rates in Albany and Decatur, according to a dispatch received this afternoon by The Daily from Montgomery.

The increase sought by the company includes not only the rates on fire hydrants, but the rates for service in all homes and business houses in the two cities.

Copies of the petition will not be available here until Tuesday, but according to information from the capitol the company asks the right to increase the rates on fire hydrants from $40 to $50 a year; the minimum meter rate where one fixture is used from 90 cents to $1.25 per month; the minimum meter rates where more than one fixture is used from $1.33 per month to $1.75 per month.

This means that residents paying a minimum meter charge of $4.00 per quarter would have to pay, under the proposed schedule, a minimum of $5.25 a quarter, it was said.

It will be recalled that the water company has been making an effort for several months to obtain an increased rate for fire hydrants in the Twin Cities, but the application today was the first evidence of the company's intention to seek a general increase from all residents, as well as the municipalities themselves.

NEW OUTBREAKS IN JAPANESE STRIKE

Four More Are Killed In Street Rioting During the Day

(Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, June 1—New outbreaks in the Japanese spinning mill strike agitation continued today, resulting in the killing of four more Chinese students, bringing the total dead to 16 since the rioting started in the streets Saturday.

In the latest outbreak at one o'clock this afternoon Sikh police fired into a crowd of demonstrators, mortally wounding one Chinese student.

This afternoon's outbreak came after sporadic disturbances were reported from many sections throughout a morning, during which police patrols armed with sabres and rifles, marched through the streets of Shanghai.

Hankins was the first of 30 witnesses sworn in by the prosecution. He testified he assisted in examining the books of Conecuh county in 1924 and 1925 and identified certain warrants as bearing

MORGAN COUNTY TO SPEND LARGE FUND TO SAVE HIGHWAYS

Several Roads Will Be Resurfaced With An Asphalt Coating

BIDS REQUESTED FOR THE WORK

Specifications Can Be Obtained From Office Of M. S. Bingham

Morgan County today is advertising for bids from contractors who desire the contract for re-surfacing several of the county pikes.

Formal notice of the intention of the county to let a contract for the work was given by Probate Judge L. P. Tropp in The Daily today. Bids will be accepted up to 10 o'clock on the morning of July 13. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $500.

The formal notice did not describe the roads which will be re-surfaced but it is understood the plan of the county is to keep every one of the highways constructed during the past few years in the best possible condition. Those thoroughfares which have suffered the heaviest wear and tear, due to heavy traffic will have a new surface of asphalt.

It is estimated the total work will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. Specifications may be obtained by those interested from M. S. Bingham, Morgan County engineer.

Morgan County recently has spent in the neighborhood of $400,000 on construction of a chain of highways, connecting the more important roads of the county with the state projects. At the time the voters authorized the issue, it was stated that the county would have funds, from the automobile and gasoline tax, to maintain these highways.

"This is a very important conference," Dr. McRee stated today, "and I hope that every Scout will make his plans to attend. We are starting our campaign a little late and only the fact that the weather lately has been unusually dry has saved us. We must work rapidly now, for rain may start at any time and we all desire to get the fly and mosquito breeding places located and treated before then."

TRIO BARE PLOT TO KIDNAP MARY

Attorney For One of the Conspirators to Ask For His Release

(Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 1—With three purported confessions in their hands and a trio of alleged plotters under lock and key, police investigators, working on the Mary Pickford kidnapping case, met today with representatives of the District Attorney's office to discuss presentation of the so-called $200,000 plot to the county grand jury.

In the meantime an attorney, retained by the wife of A. J. Woods, one of the alleged conspirators, announced he would seek Woods' immediate release on a writ of habeas corpus. Woods, who is a truck driver, and his two associates, C. A. Holcomb, who is also a truck driver, and C. Z. Stevens, an automobile salesman, have all signed confessions of their part in the kidnapping plot, according to police.

In the purported confession, the prisoners admit that under the stimulus of strong liquor, as was from time to time available to them, they talked of various ways of getting easy money. Various projects were discussed, Jackie Cooga, Pola Negri, the grand child of Doheny, the oil magnate, all being discussed as possible kidnapping victims, with Mary Pickford being picked as a final prospect for a really profitable kidnapping.

Conferences were held and it was agreed Miss Pickford should be seized. The kidnapping should be given an up-to-minute camouflage by bundling her in a car decorated as a Shrine float and the victim should be held in a secluded house, until her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, paid the conspirators $200,000.

The men were seized by police while the selection of a house was still a matter of discussion.

POLICE ARE BAFFLED BY "MYSTERY FIRE"

Firemen Find the Body of Clubman In His Apartment

(Associated Press)

CHICAGO, June 1—Conflicting stories confronted police today in their efforts to account for a mystery fire which caused the death of Deo Reynolds Parsons, wealthy broker and clubman, in his apartment in a fashionable northside neighborhood Sunday morning.

Firemen found Parsons body partly clothed, in the burned drawing room of his house. In the apartment at the time were Mrs. Parsons and James King, a policeman who said he had accompanied the broker home several hours previous.

Mrs. Parsons, an amateur singer, known to her friends as a motorist and horsewoman, suffered slight burns on her face, while King's hands were burned and he was injured when he fell to the ground from a second story window.

Mrs. Parsons, when she greeted firemen who entered the apartment, said she did not know of her husband's death. First she told the police she and Mr. Parsons returned home at 10:30 Saturday. Later she fixed the time at 10:30 a. m. Sunday. She said she retired immediately. Neighbors however, said they heard the two talking loudly in front of the house about 4:30 a. m.

Awakened by smoke about 10:30 a. m., Mrs. Parsons summoned the Japanese servant who sounded the alarm. The Japanese said that previously Mr. Parsons had awakened him to prepare breakfast for the clubman and Policeman King.

Breakfast over, the butler went back to bed, he said, leaving Parsons and his guest in the living room. The firemen believed that Parsons, holding a lighted cigarette, may have fallen asleep on the couch, thus starting the fire.

On the table beside the body was found an unexploded revolver cartridge. Its presence has not been accounted for.

King said that at the time he ended his patrol duty, an automobile careened toward him on the street and halted at his side and the single occupant, Parsons, asked him to drive him home. King accompanied the broker to the apartment and had breakfast there, he said. He had just reached the downstairs entrance, he related when a man rushed up and

"BLACK DAMP" IS THOUGHT TO HAVE CAUSED TRAGEDY

Party Was Explaining Unused Portion Of The Piper Mine

FIRE OCCURRED 2 MONTHS AGO

The Heading Had Been Sealed Since The Time Of Blaze

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 1—Six white miners were killed early last night in a mine accident at Piper, Ala., according to reports to the Little Cahaba Coal company here, owners of the mine.

Death is believed to have been caused by accumulation of black damp in an unused heading of the mine which the men were exploring. There was no explosion.

The dead are: Fred Basham, John Wright, L. H. Horton, Steve Scott, Jeff Warren and Eli Lucas, all residents of Piper.

The heading where the men met death, had been sealed up two months following a fire in March. The heading was opened Sunday and the six men went in to see if the fire was out. Attempts had been made to ventilate the shaft when the men went in, and officials believed the heading was safe.

About an hour after the exploring party went in, other miners followed. The bodies of the six were found about 700 yards from the entrance to the heading. Those nearest the entrance were lying face downward, facing the entrance, indicating they had endeavored to get out when overcome.

The mine is known as Piper Mine Number two and is located near Piper in Bibb County about 45 miles south of Birmingham. The Little Cahaba Coal company is owned by Memphis and Alabama interests.

STEEL EQUIPMENT ON ACCOMMODATION; SCHEDULE FASTER

Shorter Time Required For Tuscaloosa Run Than Heretofore

PARLOR CAR FOR TRAIN IS PLANNED

Popular Train Will Be Made One Of The Best On System

A brand new train, operating on an old schedule made over, and already referred to by railroad employees as "the little Pan" made its appearance on the Louisville and Nashville Sunday and will operate between Tuscaloosa and Decatur.

The old "Birmingham accommodation" made its appearance yesterday in entirely new dress, the wooden coaches being replaced with all-steel equipment, electric lighted vestibules cars. It is rumored that the road plans a little later, to add a parlor car to the train also, as an additional comfort for patrons of the "accommodation."

Milton L. Andrews, Albany ticket agent, today announced a change in the schedule of the train, the schedule between here and Tuscaloosa being materially shortened. The train will leave the Decatur station at 5:10 a. m. and the Albany station at 5:13 a. m. en route to Tuscaloosa. The train will arrive at 7:35 at Albany and 7:40 at Decatur on the return trip.

The new schedule is considerably faster than the old one. The run to Seaford, just out of Birmingham, will be eliminated under the new schedule the announcement stated.

The accommodation service, one of the oldest features of the Louisville and Nashville's operation in this territory, is used by hundreds of citizens for travel and the new conveniences will be very pleasing to a large part of the travelling public.

It is understood the road plans to make the accommodations' equipment as good as any.

The Southern from the west has been moved up about 30 minutes, to make connection here with the revised Pan-American schedule and the accommodation, in turn, has been moved up to make connection with the Southern.

YOUR HEALTH Follow Natural Laws If You Would Live Long

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

RECENTLY I read in Blackstone's Commentaries on the Laws of England, a wonderful chapter on the nature of laws in general. The author had been discussing the so-called "natural laws." Then I found this:

"If we farther advance, from mere inactive matter to vegetable and animal life, we shall find them still governed by laws, more numerous indeed, but equally fixed and inviolable. The whole progress of plants, from the seed to the root, and from thence to the seed again; the method of animal nutrition, indigestion, secretion, and all other branches of vital economy; are not left to chance, or the will of the creature itself, but are performed in a wondrous involuntary manner, and guided by unerring rules laid down by the great Creator."

Law is a rule of action dictated by a superior being. Laws are made to be obeyed and must be obeyed. Existence depends on obedience to the laws of life. Not health alone, but life itself depends on the observance of the laws which have been laid down for our observance.

In the world there are many well-informed persons who know something about everything and everything about some things. It is a pity that large numbers of such individuals neglect the simplest and plainest of the laws of living.

As a doctor I have heard suffering men complain loudly of the injustice of their misery. "What have I done to deserve this?" "What have I done to deserve this?" "What have I done to deserve this?"

Why should they not suffer? If Nature did not rebel and send pain and misery, it would be all our teachings. The simple rules of hygiene are well understood by everybody. They can be observed without casting a gloom on life. But they must be observed. Misery and early death will be sent in penalty for their violation.

Digestion and nourishment depend on right eating. Good lungs and pure blood depend on right breathing. Strong muscles and powerful heart action depend on daily exercise. Pure water, sunlight and fresh air contain the elements of health.

Nature's unerring rules are easy to learn and not difficult to obey. Long life and useful service are the rewards for right living.

RUFFO MAKES APOLOGIES FOR TEMPERAMENTAL SHOW

BERLIN—An exhibition of temperament characteristic in many artists of various callings, was given by Titta Ruffo, the Italian baritone when he made his first appearance in Berlin opera. Singing the title role in "Rigetto," the singer complained in the third act that Conductor Dobrowen was moving too slowly for him. After signalling repeatedly to the conductor, Ruffo lost patience and with one bound was beside the prompter's box, gesticulating frantically. Two factions were formed immediately in the audience, one for the singer and the other siding with the conductor. So much opposition arose that it was impossible to continue the performance and the orchestra proved its loyalty to the conductor by refusing to play until Ruffo had apologized. This Ruffo readily agreed to do, appeared before the curtain and after expressing his regrets to the conductor for the incident embraced and kissed him.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Incapacitated, mentally, by shock, as a result of experiences during the World War, Renshaw makes a proposition to David Campbell, wealthy, elderly man of leisure, that for a year he assume responsibility for him (Renshaw)—practically "buy" him. Doctor Stanley, life-long friend of Campbell's, indorses the proposition, which Campbell, with some natural misgivings, accepts. The arrangement is that the young man becomes an inmate of the Campbell household, with the nominal duty of secretary. Renshaw meets Verity, Campbell's granddaughter, and gets the impression that she does not like him. Jenks, the butler, Renshaw also feels, is distinctly hostile.

CHAPTER II.—At dinner, a guest, referred to as Madame Hvoslef, is not present. Renshaw has a feeling that the servants are spying on him. Jenks warns him "that there are queer things" going on in the house. That night he is disturbed by the appearance on the wall of his room of a small blue circle of light. Mysterious noises in the corridor outside his door cause him to investigate, but he discovers nothing unusual.

CHAPTER III.—Campbell tells Renshaw that the household is in some respects "unusual," but makes light of his story of the mysterious sounds. Renshaw meets Madame Hvoslef, a foreigner, with an air of mystery.

CHAPTER IV.—Madame Hvoslef asks Renshaw to go to New York, a short journey, on a mission for her next day. During the night the blue circle again appears and the mysterious noises are resumed. Arising to investigate, Renshaw discovers he is locked in. He hears the sound of a heavy body dragging itself up to the transom over the door. Then a hand appears, apparently seeking to open the door, and Renshaw hears the sound of a heavy body crawling away.

CHAPTER V.—Remembering Jenks' warning, Renshaw tells the butler of the mysterious noises, but gets no satisfaction. He searches the house for a handbag, declaring its contents are priceless, which he is to deliver to a Mr. Atkins in New York. After dressing, Renshaw again finds his door locked, but it is promptly opened by Jenks. Renshaw delivers the bag. Hart, Campbell's chauffeur, who drove him to town, tells him Verity and Madame Hvoslef are at the Waldorf. Remembering his locked door that morning Renshaw is vaguely uneasy about the handbag, and asks up Mr. Atkins. He learns that the bag he delivered contained only blank paper.

CHAPTER VI.—Meeting the ladies at the Waldorf Renshaw learns that Madame Hvoslef's property is safe. Jenks tells him that the duplicate, for which no explanation can be made, Hart gets permission to stay in town that night, producing a substitute key. On the way home Renshaw sends back the substitute, taking the wheel himself.

CHAPTER VII.—Despite her indifference Renshaw feels himself becoming deeply interested in Verity. During the night he hears the sound of a girl, who tells him her grandfather has had an accident and is unconscious. They get the old man to bed. Restored to consciousness he with difficulty conveys to Renshaw a message, "Watch! Take charge."

CHAPTER VIII.—Verity is annoyed at her grandfather placing Renshaw in charge, but they reach an amicable understanding, Verity being impressed by Renshaw's masterful handling of the situation.

CHAPTER IX.—Doctor Stanley gives Campbell, and departs, leaving the local doctor, Morris, in charge. Stanley makes light of the mysterious episode, as Renshaw describes them. He tells the secretary Madame Hvoslef's property in the handbag was her memoirs, which she feared might be stolen.

CHAPTER X.—While Verity is showing Renshaw over the house, the two are locked in a clothes closet, the door slamming shut for no apparent reason, and resisting all Renshaw's efforts to open it. Verity is the victim of asphyxiation when Jenks, in great perturbation, releases them.

CHAPTER XI.—Renshaw tells Jenks he is convinced the closet door was intentionally closed, but the butler gives him no satisfaction. Their dependence on each other draws Verity and Renshaw closer.

CHAPTER XII.—Renshaw's position of importance in the Campbell household has impressed Doctor Morris. He questions Stanley regarding him. Stanley tells him "Renshaw is, in his proper person, John R. Hamilton, financial expert known to the capitals of all the world. Stanley also reveals the tragedy that has cast a cloud over Renshaw's life. Renshaw, in a talk with Verity, is convinced that he has a right to hope that his growing affection is, if even in a small degree, reciprocated. On his way to his room that night he is attacked.

Unless he could shake off that effort, he did so—and gulped breath of air with a gasp that was first sound of the encounter. He had his hands more than full. fellow he was fighting was an expert, up to all sorts of tricks, and fettered by any rules of the game. Moreover, he was in condition, and secretary was not sure of his staying power. The silent struggle went on. Renshaw inch by inch for his adversary across the threshold into his bedroom.

There the combat continued with growing intensity of desperation. The chair went down. The reading lamp crashed against the brass feet. Each of the fighters appeared to the same inspiration about that fight. If a man's head were brought against it with sufficient force, that would be out of commission for time. Both contestants were coming exhausted, and both now showing it. Their faces came raggedly. Renshaw found self on top of the other, and something between his hands that thick and slippery. He was conscious of agonizing pain. One of his fingers had been bitten almost through, turned sick, but hung on to the other that choked and gurgled. He knew could not hold on much longer. strength was almost spent. But the figure under him grew larger.

He was prepared for more trouble. He knelt on his antagonist's chest, his fingers deeper into the throat, taking advantage of the respite to his own lungs with air. But it was something reassuring about continued limpness and stillness of sprawled thing under him. After brief wait he took from one of pockets some of the light, strong, with which he had provided himself and bound the figure where he lay.

When he has finished it straightened himself, drew a few deep breaths, and shut his bedroom door. Then, turning on the lights, surveyed his prisoner.

The man lay face downward, as had been turned during the blind Obviously, he had worn a comb mask and light headpiece. Their tattered remnants strewn the floor. garment that had looked and felt like hair was a one-piece affair of a fuzzy material that covered the whole from neck to ankles. Combined with the mask and headpiece, the would have served very well as a masquerader had blackened his face. To heighten its effect, the masquerader had blackened his hair and arms; but the back of his head was white where it was not black and blue. Renshaw turned the trussed figure, looked into eyes, that were now conscious, nodded slowly.

"Jenks," he affably observed, thought so.

For a long moment Jenks did speak. Apparently he could not, eyes stared up at Renshaw dully, he had not yet taken in what had pended. He tried to move, and effort made him groan.

"You've—broken—my—arm—you!" he brought out at last.

"We'll have it reset, and it will nicely in Sing Sing," Renshaw said, a chair close to the prostrate figure, sitting down, regarded it with warm interest.

"So all this little masquerade for my benefit," he mused at "What was the idea?"

Jenks did not answer. Renshaw prodded him with his foot.

"Speak up," he urged. "What is it for?"

"To get rid of you, d—n you!" Verity else did you think it was for?" gro the captive.

Renshaw shook his head at "You're not acting at all like a Jenks," he astutely pointed out. played for big stakes, and lost it. Why don't you take your medicine a man?" His voice changed. "So idea was to get rid of me?" he brisly. "Why? Speak up, J. Masquerade a little longer. E sport."

The man was silent.

"So we had the thumps and crawling sound and the climbing and the locked doors and the—Did do all that yourself?"

"Anne shut that closet door, her! She might of killed Miss Campbell."

"And you didn't want that?" "Of course I didn't."

"Why not? You seemed to be for anything."

Jenks was weary of the conversation. He gave the inquisitive man another rude bit of advice, "that serene individual quietly ignored. So you did it all yourself, aid the bundle of bricks I just saw in the closet. I understand. You about that infernal light—the blue circle? Flashlight effect, of course where were you?"

"Tree."

"Oh, that would be it. By Jenks, you're thorough. I'll say for you. Nothing was too trouble, was it? And all to get of a husky six-footer who hadn't nerve left but might have been venient to have around in a crisis. Jenks remained silent.

"And as soon as I was out of way the gang of you were going Campbell's ready money and the elry of the ladies and skip. The what you were after. It would been a big haul."

For the first time, the face of changed.

"Nothin' like it," he snarled. "Oh, yes, Edward Edwards Joe Stevens, alias the Ourang alias Joseph Jenks. You were all this merely to get rid of Press agents declare that Joe Martin, famous chimpanzee appearing in Birmingham, has the mentality of a five year old child. They evidently have the monkey mixed up with themselves.

As proof of the theory that the next generation is more advanced than the last, look at the records for the international speedway classic at Indianapolis. De Paola was taught the art of racing by his uncle, Ralph DePalma. DePalma came across the finishing line in seventh place while his protegee was first. Paola smashed all records made by his uncle or anyone else on the Indianapolis track. Another victory for the rising generation.

Out in California another victory has been scored against the evolution theory, a double victory it might be called for it discourages the fad of monkey and other household pets in place of children. A pet monkey heard the cries of the baby of the house in the night. The pet went to the room and proceeded to smother the child to death in attempting to copy the actions of the mother in tucking the tot in the covers. Certainly not much mentality about that.

Boy Scouts of Albany-Decatur start today in an effort to raise the necessary funds for a successful anti-malaria-mosquito campaign. The Scouts have not been long in reciprocating. Only last week committees in the cities more than obtained enough to place a supervisor of the work here. Let it be hoped that the people of these cities will not fail to respond to so small a call from the kids. They are trying to better the health of these communities. It only costs twenty-five cents to aid in the eradication of the mosquito and fly, it may cost several hundreds of dollars if you choose to delay the work, allowing the pests to breed and grow. Morgan county can be made one of the most desirable sections of the country to live in with the proper health protection. It always remains for the people to have the last word. We do not believe that they will stop a work of such tremendous importance as the wiping out of malaria and other diseases, products of insect pests.

IS MEMORIAL DAY BEING DISREGARDED?

Sunday was Memorial Day, the day upon which heads in the nation were to be bowed in silent respect for those who have gone on, those who died for the protection of American homes, those who gave up their lives for others.

In Albany-Decatur there were a few simple services. The churches observed the day, some of them with special sermons to remind the people of the duty that is still owed to those who have fought the fight, though it was fought many years ago.

Lack of observance of Memorial Day is not alone the only holiday that is passed by almost unnoticed. Armistice Day, and even the Fourth of July are being forgotten. As we get further away from the days, hallowed in American memories, we seemingly forget the importance.

One pastor in the Cities expressed the need of observance and pointed out the danger in the future when children will forget that such a day has been set aside in American history. Negligence will not be any fault of theirs, it will be upon the shoulders of the parents who allowed the meaning of the sacred day to escape the mind of the rising generation.

The city of Florence and the Tri-Cities have been halted in their progress with the greater Shoals area because a nation's heads have not seen fit to develop what lays before them, but that has not halted the spirit of the people one bit. Influential men of Florence are at this time engaged in the building of a railroad that will open a vast mineral and agricultural resource in Tennessee and Kentucky. This area is not served by any railroad at the present time, adding another tribute to the foresight of the Florence businessmen. The cities of Northern Alabama are ever looking for an opportunity for expansion. The Tri-Cities may be said to have laid the ground work, their many paved streets over areas not yet populated forms the ground work for the dream of a greater Shoals area. Huntsville is fast becoming one of the most beautiful little cities in this section with her many mills working day and night and her system of good roads leading to every colony. Albany-Decatur has likewise started at the center and started working outward, reaching always to expand, the building of this bridge here will mean the opening up of another territory entirely. The Valley cities may join at some time in the future, the dream of seventy-five miles of city may not be inspired alone by a pipe. At this time, however, it is the spirit of the thing. Stopped in one project they start off at another angle, always on the move toward growth and constructive building.

We won't have a passenger bridge completed here for two years, it's going to take that long to construct the splendid structure. In the meantime we should stop and think of what we are offering the tourists. Every city of our size, every larger city, almost every small town has something to offer the tourist. We have a lot down on Lee street that is filled with water in wet weather, dirt and tin cans in hot weather. Lee street offers a camp site, it's true, but it ends there.

Take the little city of Columbia, Tennessee, for instance. Just on the outside of the corporate limits of that city there is a tourist camp. A beautiful site on the banks of Duck River has been given over entirely to travelers, a garden has been planted that people might have fresh vegetables, flowers run along the boundaries and add to the attractiveness and natural beauty of the place. Florence Civitan club is sponsoring such a move and have an attendant to look after the needs of the visitors. What is the result? Friendliness, a desire to return to your town and an advertisement to others to stop in your town. We will do well to take this subject under consideration. Show the folks on the outside that we have some of the advantages that we are always talking about. Show them what a climate we have, what a good place we offer for them to settle in; let them know Albany-Decatur by sight and not by ear, sign, or map. Why not establish such a camp? It may cost a little heavily at the start, but bread cast upon the waters will always return two fold.

CANADIAN SEES DANGER OF SEX
STORIES TO AMERICA

While we are here at home preparing the first bolt that is to be hurled into the camp of many novelists, writers, and publishers of magazines in which there are appearing many stories of unknown origin and of no value so far as literature is concerned, T. D. Rimmer, Canadian literary critic, discusses the danger of such literature that has been sweeping the nation during the years following the war.

In practically every home in America some one of these periodicals is to be found. These articles do not appeal to the intellect, there is no constructive literary type to be found among them, only a book or magazine filled from cover to cover with stories appealing to sex urges and desires, stories that moral people would not like to repeat in any sort of company.

Mr. Rimmer has the following to say regarding the literature of the day in America:

"Most of the leading American writers are catering to a public demand for sex stories, even though they are talented enough to create a literature free from sordidness, T. D. Rimmer, a Canadian literary critic, states in the current International Book Review. Mr. Rimmer also believes that if the tide of obscenity is not stemmed soon there will be a harmful reversion to the prudish Victorian standards.

"No one can say," Mr. Rimmer writes, "on what shore the present sea of sexual obsession and Freudian abnormality will eventually cast us. All the old bulwarks of sane conservatism seem to have been swept away in this turbulence that threatens to overwhelm us. It is a telling commentary on public taste that there should be a demand for these products.

"Even the American novelists with an assured standing seem, with a few exceptions, to cater to the unhealthy public demand for sexual fare. These men, surely, are talented enough to give us a fiction that will be free from the sordid side of sex. Yet their books up to the present have not yielded any sign of a desire to do so.

"There are few of us who wish the return of the Victorian standards of prudery, but it is idle to deny that the swing of the pendulum has been too great; unless the license is checked, there will be a reaction, and what pleased the public formerly will become an offense, and writers will be wrapped up once more in the swaddling bands against which they rebelled in Victoria's time.

"Thus from the viewpoint of self-interest, at least, writers would do well to conform to some code that will outlaw this modern craze, the sort of literature that has always marked decadency in a nation."

Even the best authors, he declares, are failing to lift literature from the turbulence of obscenity. Think of talented men and women gifted in the art of writing, resorting to this sordid practice for the sake of a few extra dollars.

So far as we know there has been but a single effort in the entire nation to curb this practice. In Washington the officials have attempted to end the practice by cutting off the demand, that is they have stopped the book-sellers from selling some periodicals. This has been done by suggestion and not by law, as yet.

The time is not far in the future when there will appear new statutes on the nation's law books. Mother's clubs, woman's clubs, civic organizations are going on record as opposing the publication of such literature. They are not only going to oppose it, they will stop reading such articles and it is a certainty that when the American public stops buying then the art will go into the discard.

Just as Mr. Rimmer says, we do not wish to return to Victorian prudery, that isn't the effort at all. Victorian prudery means the muzzling of worthwhile publications, voicing an opinion will even be barred. It is not necessary for the nation to take such a step. Stop the demand and there will be no more obscene literature.

A feeble defense is put up whenever the subject is mentioned in this light. The colleges and universities of the country teach Shakespeare, Whitman and Boccaccio are all considered classical, Chaucer's works are looked upon as masterpieces of literature, why then should there be any curb placed on present-day literature—does it not all seem equal on the same plane? There is a vast difference in the works of the poets and writers of that day and the realistic fanatics of this day. When a reader picks up one of the old classics he does not see life as it is seen every day; he sees only a myth, queer people, beautiful language, perfect rhetoric, rhythm of sound, music. He does not regard the story as having any foundation of truth, he sees only the fantastic imagination of the poet or writer in letter form. It is not the case with the works of today. The stories we read are of real people with a modern setting and in every-day language. There is little beauty of word combination and nothing left to imagination, just the bare facts. Even the power of suggestion is forgotten, apparently nothing is forgotten in the effort to make the story of the novel popular and be rated among the "Six Best Sellers."

The newspapers of the day are fighting the publication and sale of such literature for it is a distinct and imminent danger to them. With the swinging of the pendulum to the other extreme the press is going to be included, although the majority of newspapers are not guilty of playing filth in their columns to attract readers and swell circulation figures.

When the nation sees the danger that is being threatened every day in the disruption of the morals of the young, then laws will appear. When older people stop buying the publications, ban the appearance of such a periodical in the home, then there will be no such material on the market.

by

ALTHOUGH it deals with some of the interesting problems of married life, it is not, strictly speaking, a problem novel. It is first of all an absorbing story, with characters very much alive, natural and appealing.

Since dramatic incidents come into the lives of all natural, everyday folks—probably more tensely dramatic than those experienced by the more artificial class—this story will have a keen interest for a majority of men and women of today. The author has given it the stirring qualities and the elements of heart-interest for which her books are famous.

KINDERGARTENERS HAVE PARTY

The closing exercises of the Mothers Club Kindergarten took place on Friday morning when their beloved teacher, Miss Frances Himes entertained them with a party. Each member had the privilege of inviting one little friend.

Many games were played on the lawn when Misses Bernice and Elkins Himes assisted them after which they were ushered into the Kindergarten room and were served frozen suckers. The shades were drawn and candles lighted the room which had been appropriately decorated in the American Beauty colors, making an attractive background for the little tots who gave a program to entertain their friends whom they had invited to be with them. Numbers on the program included games, speeches and folk dances which were joined in by every member of the school. Dainty sucker dolls were presented as souvenirs.

This was the official closing of the Kindergarten for the summer and at the last meeting of the Mothers Club it was voted to re-open it in September. This, the first year, has been a big success due to the splendid work of Miss Frances Himes, the teacher and the Mothers Club is to be congratulated on having secured her services. Sechrist, superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of machinery on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, were loud in their praise of the golf course at the Country club, after having enjoyed 18 holes with Charles Mathews local master mechanic, and Thomas Hodson. A Hint for Beginners

The cross-word puzzle diagram is merely a means of concealing words which are synonymous to those listed and which will interlock perfectly and so read equally well crosswise or downwards. Always look for the number of the synonym on the diagram. If horizontal, you must find a word to fit between that number and the first shaded stop to the right; if vertical, you must fit your word between the number and the first shaded stop below.

Postal Authorities War Against Obscene Matters

WASHINGTON.—Recent increase in the flood of questionable matters offered for transmission through the mails, has led to further tightening of the routine safeguards employed in the postal service for keeping it out and for prosecution of those violating the federal statutes in that regard.

Thousands of complaints have come to the office of the postmaster general from parents and associations asking that the department augment its efforts to protect children from obscene literature and pictures.

The close surveillance exercised over the character of matter passing through the mails, officials believe, has affected a material decrease in the number of dealers in pornographic matter. Federal courts have discouraged the efforts of such dealers by upholding the post office department in each instance where rulings excluding obscene matter from the mails has been challenged.

Foreign dealers, especially since the war and the return of American soldiers from Europe, have been active in endeavoring to dispose of their products in this country. In many instances foreign consignments are intercepted at custom houses. The trade of these offenders has been crippled by the postal authorities returning to senders letters addressed to all known dealers in obscene matter, by confis-

COMMISSION REPORTS SIMPLE EDUCATION AS GREAT NEED IN AFRICA

NEW YORK.—The natives of Africa are at present on the sidelines, watching European and Asiatic settlers play football with the future of a continent rich in natural resources and the great question-mark in international peace and prosperity says the official report of the Educational Commission to East Africa, issued today by the Phelps-Stokes Fund.

The commission spent six months in the field, travelling from French Somaliland to Cape town, and supplemented the work of a similar group which studied West, South and Equatorial Africa in 1920. The chairman of both commissions was Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, educational director of the Phelps-Stokes fund which was founded in 1908 to promote negro education in the South and in Africa. In the African studies the American and British governments and the missionary societies of Great Britain and North America co-operated by lending experts to serve on the commissions, and the British government tendered Dr. Jones an official dinner at Lancaster House, London, on his way back from Africa.

Dr. Jones who writes the report, calls for the inclusion of the native in a plan of co-operation which will include governmental officials, missionaries, settlers and traders. He looks to the European nations, which control all of Africa, except Liberia on the West Coast and Abyssinia in the east, to take the leadership in working out a definite plan and not leave it to the individual and uncoordinated efforts of the governors of the various colonies.

Richly endowed by nature, Africa has been losing ground in the manpower essential for unlocking this great physical wealth, says the report. The heritage of the slave raids, the ravages of disease and an ignorance which permits malnutrition in a land of plenty are all given as causes for the sparse population. The African problem is essentially a population problem, Dr. Jones writes.

The solution he recommends is stated in terms of education intelligently adapted to the needs of native life. Simplicity rather than complexity is urged, and Dr. Jones gives as his basic "simples" of education: (1) health and sanitation for a land where the infant death rate ranges from 300 to upwards of 600 per thousand; (2) training in crop production, animal husbandry, food preservation and the farm trades for a people who are often decimated by famine in a land of plenty; (3) proper understanding of the "decencies and safeties of the home," including preparation of food, provision of proper clothing and care of the ill; and (4) healthful recreation and amusements for a people notorious for the physical and sexual excesses of their primitive games. He pays high tribute to the character-building influence of the Christian religion; at the same time he would salvage as much as possible of native traditions and customs, modifying them and directing them into the proper channels.

The report also recommends that a director of education be included in every territorial administration, and that the pioneer and continuing importance of the missionary schools be recognized by grants-in-aid. However degraded her status in any tribe, the African woman yields great power over the health and the home life of her family, and education is therefore every bit as important for the girls as it is for the boys.

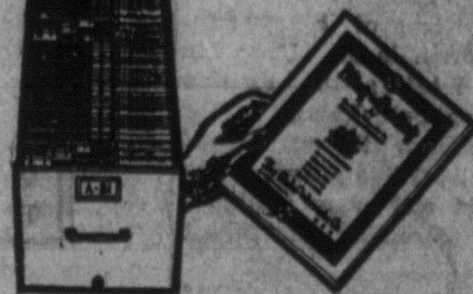

cating great quantities of unmailable advertising circulars and the materials as well, and by acquainting those attempting to import such matter with their responsibility and liability to prosecution under the penal provisions of the laws.

The numerous small magazines, depending for their popularity on the pornographic material in them, are the source of continual complaint and the exclusion of many of them from the mails curtail to a considerable extent their widespread circulation. These publications have been responsible for increasing the work of the post office department's legal forces. The magazines when excluded from the mails find their way to newsstands through other channels.

AMUSEMENTS

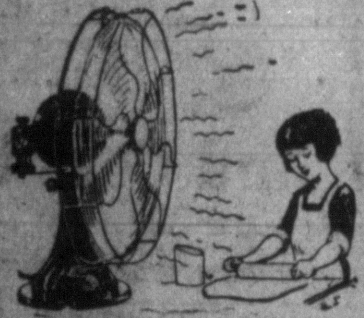

"East of Suez" Pola Negri's latest Paramount starring picture today at the Princess theater, challenges, for color and richness, anything ever before seen on the screen.

The settings included in the picture which was adapted by Sada Cowan from Somerset Maugham's stage play by that name, show a magnificent Chinese house-boat furnished with gorgeous eastern hangings, idols of bronze and rare Chinese carpets, a Chinese garden, a Chinese temple which rivals in magnificence the famed places of Peking, scenes on an ocean liner and an amazing array of fashion which contrasts the modes of both Paris and the Orient.

Among the tense dramatic situations which are developed by the story are scenes between two men and a woman with glass of poisoned wine; the intrigue of a powerful Chinese nobleman in his efforts to win a foreign bride; the exciting moment when Pola Negri, as the persecuted heroine, throws herself from a house-boat into a river in the dead of night and many additional scenes said to contain enthralling human interest.

Edmund Lowe, Rockcliffe Fellowes and Noah Beery are featured in support of Miss Negri.

Ralston Surprises Power Company With Win 10-9; Merrimack Here Wednesday

The Ralston Independents surprised the Alabama Power company, Albany-Decatur fans and probably themselves on Saturday afternoon when they took a last minute victory from the Alabama Power company. Tapscott doubled to left in the ninth after two were out with two on and the winning counters trickled across the pan.

Opening with their characteristic attack the Powermen chased across the platter exactly six times in the opening round and removed Tapscott from the box. Base hits clouded the horizon although the Power folks were minus their galaxy of hitters in the personages of Webb, Pepper, Banks and Conley who are all hitting around the .500 mark.

The Ralstonites started the attack in the second inning and scored a trio. They duplicated again in the third.

The Power company took the lead in the sixth with a trio and the Ralstonites knotted the count in the seventh with three runs.

With the score at nine all the Powermen opened the ninth with an attack that netted a single run. Things looked pretty safe for them until Tapscott's blow with two men out.

The game was an old fashioned batting spree with Tapscott and Bloodworth being hit freely. Calloway, who replaced Tapscott had his outdrop breaking nicely and kept his offering away from most of the Power hitters.

The score by innings:
Alabama Power 600 003 001—9
Ralston 033 000 302—10

MERRIMACK HERE ON WEDNESDAY TO FACE POWER CO.

The Merrimack Mills team will arrive Wednesday full of fight and pep to stop the Alabama Power company on the second meeting of the two teams. Gallagher will probably be slated for mound duty for the local lads, this however depends a great deal upon his getting into shape before that date. The affair will be called promptly at 3:30 o'clock at Malone Park.

L. & N. VS. DECATUR

The Louisville & Nashville shopmen will meet the Decatur entrant in the first game of the city league series of the week. The game will not have a great deal of bearing on the league standing although the shopmen will have an opportunity to chalk up the first win of the season.

Moulton News

The Lawrence County Board of Education met in regular session Friday, a busy day ensued with the sessions lasting from shortly after nine in the forenoon to almost six in the afternoon, all members were present. Aside from much routine business hearings were given a delegation from Hillsboro and College Grove schools in the valley asking consolidation of the two schools while a delegation from College Grove represented opponents of the consolidation; a decision was postponed until a call meeting soon to be held as was a decision in the matter of request from Town Creek for a ninth teacher, and other matters. Among the transactions passed on was the re-appointment of Miss Lydia Tidwell for supervisor of elementary schools; Miss Tidwell has already served two terms; the renomination of T. P. Thornton for vocational work at Town Creek making for him his third year at that school; practically the adoption of the salary schedule for the next session with but slight changes though with increased costs, reductions seemed ad-visible yet the best teachers cannot be had for short term schools and low salaries; the appointment and re-appointment of more than two hundred district trustees for a term of two years and the adoption of a budget for the ensuing year both for the county schools and for the county high school. The problem confronting the board is that of giving the children at least a five month term on funds scarcely sufficient to run the schools four and one half months. A statement of present financial conditions showed that the county might possibly come out with a balance of slightly less than $100 at the end of the scholastic year.

Sandlin-Cowan Drug Co., is having material placed on the ground for the erection of a modern two-story drug store on the site of their present corner building southeast side of the Moulton public square. The second story is to be fitted up with a large number of well lighted office rooms. The structure is to be eighty feet by twenty-four feet front with foundation of concrete and walls of brick. This will be the second business house erected during the spring and summer in Moulton.

Representatives from eleven north

Alabama counties representing mainly the county agents spent Thursday and Friday under the leadership of B. M. Lufburrow in the Alabama Forest Reservation seeking a good location for a camp to be used in the future by a members of the various boys' and girls' agriculture clubs, the old "Uncle George" Riddle place, just over in Winston county portions of the forest was selected, the place is about three quarters of a mile from the Sipsey river and beautifully located for a camp. Room is given on the ground for county buildings, dining halls, athletic fields and suitable dormitories, to realize the dream of forestry people and county agents may take years but a beginning is to be made, it is said, in the coming August if for nothing more than a get-together meeting.

Miss Glenn Armor, a well known young woman of Mount Hope passed away Friday and interment took place at the old Town Creek Baptist church half way between Moulton and Mount Hope. Numerous relatives and friends from Moulton attended the burial services.

Unusual progress is being made in the completion of the Moulton-Albany-Decatur highway into Moulton by Saturday evening practically all the division next to Moulton and into the town beyond the public square was ready for the asphalt surfacing which it is understood, will soon be begun. The road leading north to the valley is to have its first loads of crushed material placed on it Monday morning; already much of the grade half way to the valley near Courtland is made.

In spite of continued drought, farmers report that crops in general over Lawrence county are not suffering though rain is needed especially in gardens. Cotton is said to be growing off well, too, notwithstanding the cold early in the past week. Many farmers are "getting up" with their work.

Mr. and Mrs. John Yarbrough of Tusculum accompanied by their children were visitors in Moulton Thursday and Friday. Mr. Yarbrough is now county agent in Colbert county going from that work in this county two ears ago, he was of the inspectors on the search for a club camp in the forest reservation last week.

Numerous teachers, now normal school students, in and around Moulton, spent the weekend between spring term and opening of summer term at Florence with home people.
